

LOSS OF LIFE THOUGHT TO TOTAL IN HUNDREDS

FLOODED DISTRICT OF LOUISIANA STILL SWEEPED BY THE TORRENTS.

RESCUE PARTIES WORK

Danger Zone Increases Rather Than Diminishes, Making Labor Most Difficult.

New Roads, La., May 6.—Flood refugees reaching here early today declared that there has been a loss of life in that part of Louisiana inundated by the Mississippi river, which rushed through the branch in the levee at Torrance. It is said that the motor boats went to rescue people from floating houses (tops) arrived too late. How many persons perished cannot be determined as the refugees brought to the concentration camps hurried hither and thither. Some families are separated and persons have been reported missing who have been taken from one camp to another. Nevertheless, a large number of refugees claim they have seen entire families swept away from homes tops.

Leaders of the rescue corps admit that several times they have seen motor boats to points where families had taken refuge on the roof of a house and have found when the boat arrived only the building, half of it submerged.

Appeals for help reached here last night from Lattaworth directly in the path of the Torrance current. Half a hundred people are reported to be in imminent danger of drowning. The houses in which they had taken refuge had been deluged and was tossed in the current.

There are at least one thousand persons who remain in the west of the inundated country west of Lattaworth and Hatchelor. Some of them are drifting about on hastily constructed rafts.

The great water in speeding at a rapid rate in the inundated sections at Pointe Coupee Parish which has never before been reached by overflows. Town after town is being swept by the muddy water.

The last of the special trains which had been bringing refugees out of the country around Hatchelor arrived last night. A relief expedition which was about ready to leave for Hatchelor received word that there was grave danger of being cut off from the tracks by water several miles east of that place.

When the first train arrived at the point of the trouble the water was flowing over the tracks for a distance of five miles but the train passed over in safety. When the second section arrived the water was rushing over the track about two feet deep. An attempt was made to reach the other side, but when about half way over the track gave way and the train toppled over.

The occupants of the derailed cars were transferred to other cars and taken to New Roads. When the third section of the special was speeding over the track about fifty-five miles north of Mordana a score of people were seen standing waist deep in water near the railway track signaling the train to stop.

The water was rising so rapidly that those in charge of the train decided it would be impossible to get all these on board to delay. The train was not stopped.

In some instances the force has been necessary to take the people out of the danger zone. One family consisting of a man, wife and a twelve-year-old boy, refused to leave their cabin which was fast becoming uninhabitable. They were picked up bodily and carried to the train. After being placed on board the boy became so frightened that he jumped out of the window. He was recaptured.

Urgent appeals for boats to be used in rescue work and the shipment of a dozen skiffs have been sent to Governor Sanders at New Orleans. The steamer from the city of Shawport with a shipment of a dozen skiffs is due to arrive today.

Hatchelor, La., May 6.—The last link breaking this town with the outside world by rail was severed late today when the swift waters from the Torrance current swept away a long stretch of the Texas and Pacific railway tracks, a short distance east of here.

Hatchelor had been a sort of concentration point for the flood sufferers in the surrounding country. Hundreds of them were brought here and later taken to New Roads to be distributed among the various relief camps at Baton Rouge and other places. The situation has grown extremely serious. There are still hundreds of others who must be rescued immediately.

More Breaks. New Orleans, La., May 6.—The first levee break reported today occurred on the Atchafalaya river, near Elba. The flood pouring through this new break adds to the menace about the town of Atchafalaya. Water now is rushing over Pointe Coupee parish from two sources, a break in the Mississippi levee already having inundated part of the parish. Hundreds of persons are in imminent danger.

NON-PARTISAN LAW IS GREAT IMPROVEMENT

Gives Cities Opportunity to Select Good Men For Various Offices Throughout State.

Madison, Wis., May 6.—That the non-partisan bill enacted by the special session of the legislature last week is one of the most important pieces of legislation put upon the statute books in recent years is the claim of Assemblyman John E. McConnell of La Crosse. He thinks the non-partisan law will operate to combine the advantages of commission and council form of city government and still allow cities to retain their special or city charter.

"The most important work of the special session, and one of the most important pieces of legislation of recent years is the law providing for non-partisan elections in cities throughout Wisconsin," said Assemblyman McConnell. "For years practically nearly all students of city government have united upon the proposition that party politics have no proper place in the management of city affairs. This idea is generally the foundation idea upon which the commission plan of government is based. Many students of city government have been doubtful of the wisdom of the city plans, fearing that in the end the tendency may be to deprive the citizens of the control of the affairs of the city and tend toward a government further removed from the people than it should be."

"Whether the danger thus suggested by many is real or not, it has prevented many cities from adopting the commission plan. The law just placed upon the statute books in Wisconsin enables a city to select its officers, and with regard to qualifications, and at the same time to retain its special or general charter. In brief, to combine the advantages of the commission and council forms of city government."

"It is peculiarly noteworthy and fitting that a measure planned and fitted to disregard politics in our city affairs should be adopted by the legislature practically without a political split and by an overwhelming majority."

Mr. McConnell said that anyone who investigated work accomplished by the special session of the legislature "will be convinced that it has been done quite satisfactorily as well as with rather unusual dispatch."

NARROW ESCAPE FROM POLITICAL BLUNDER

Republicans Nearly Lost Control of State When Jefferson Club Bill Almost Passed.

Madison, Wis., May 6.—Republicans in the legislature are just catching their breath after the discovery of their narrow escape from a political coup which if it had been successful might have made the selection of a democratic United States senator. It has been figured out that had the Jefferson club bill, providing for placing a candidate's name on more than one party ticket, been enacted into law, the Milwaukee assembly and senatorial representation might be changed to give the democrats enough votes to control the legislature. Few if any republican assemblymen had been apprised of the ends which such a law might serve, and when it was apparent that there was a good chance of its passage, Speaker Ingram called Assemblyman M. O'Connor to the chair and taking the floor offered an amendment. This contained the Massachusetts ballot plan.

"This action allowed time to organize the republicans to vote against accepting the Jefferson club bill. As a result, each measure was killed in turn. The Jefferson club plan, embodied in the Hofstadter bill, involved both national and state elections, and proposed to permit a candidate to receive the endorsement of two parties at his polls to be placed in two party columns on the ballot. In its analysis it was a shrewd scheme for a combination of democrats and republicans to oust the socialists from the legislature, and contained an agreement of the two parties to apportion the office between them. In the latter feature of the bill lay the possibility of manipulation to change the complexion of the legislature. Milwaukee county, which now has sixteen assemblymen, and in the next legislature would have nineteen would stand to send five or six more democratic members next year through the Jefferson club bill's agreement apportioning the offices between the republican and democratic parties. It is assumed that this was a possibility. The present assembly consists of 59 republicans, 29 democrats and 12 socialists. In the event there should be considerable democratic gains in legislative districts, the securing of five or six democratic members of the assembly through the manipulation under the dual party bill would have secured the majority to the advantage of the democratic party and might have prevented the election of a republican United States senator should a vacancy have occurred, as well as losing control of the legislature."

"The Jefferson club bill worked to its logical conclusion would have given Milwaukee county one republican and one democratic congressman. At present one is a republican and the other a socialist, Victor Berger. A combination of the two old parties under the plan of the bill would have retired the socialist. The plan also involved the election of county officers."

At present Milwaukee county has no democratic congressmen, state senator or assemblyman. There are five Milwaukee senators now; under the new apportionment there will be six. In the assembly there are four republicans and twelve socialists from Milwaukee—sixteen in all. Next year there will be nineteen. In both houses Milwaukee county will have twenty-five members. The Jefferson club plan would have elected three republican senators and three democratic.

Outside of this little fight, which was of brief duration, politics had but little place in the extra session.

LEGISLATURE AWAITS GOVERNOR'S ACTION

Inability of Printer to Prepare Bills for Governor Delay Adjournment Until Late Today.

Madison, Wis., May 6.—Owing to the inability of the state printer to get all the printed measures in the governor's hands this forenoon, the special session of the legislature probably will not adjourn late until late this afternoon. McGovern has gone over the text of the bills and the matter of signing them will be a protracted operation this afternoon.

MARYLAND PRIMARIES CENTER OF INTEREST

CLOSE CONTESTS FOR DELEGATES TO NATIONAL CONVENTIONS ARE PREDICTED.

PICK TAFT AND CLARK

Majority of Politicians Expect Them to Win—Name of Harmon to Appear on Ballot.

Baltimore, Md., May 6.—The Maryland primary election today will determine whether President Taft or Theodore Roosevelt will capture the sixteen votes at the republican national convention, but owing to a peculiarity in the Maryland law there is a possibility that the complexion of the delegation to the democratic convention will not be determined until the state convention. Under the new law the candidate who wins a majority of the one hundred and twenty-nine delegates for the state convention will get all the national delegates also. Since there are but two candidates for the republican preferential division of the state delegation must result in a majority for one or the other. Uncertainty may cloud the democratic situation because there are three candidates in the field, Speaker Champ Clark, Governor John S. Harmon and Governor Woodrow Wilson.

METHODIST MEETING TALKS ON HOME WORK

Discusses Problem of Immigration at Their Gathering in Minneapolis Today.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 6.—The Americanizing and Christianizing of the millions who are coming into this country from various parts of the world is one of the greatest problems of the home today, according to a report of the home missions and the church extension made today by the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in session here today.

"The total appropriation for work among the non-English-speaking people in the United States, according to a report, is $612,768. The immigration problem is a fact that is fast involving all national problems." The report says.

"The United States are a foreign-born or of foreign parentage. The thirty-three largest cities of the union are more foreign than American. The question of immigration has grown until it includes most of the other problems. It means tenements, where people are crowded like cattle, and in surroundings more unsanitary."

"New York has more rooms without windows than any city in the world—36,000—largely peopled by foreigners. This means disease, the worst shop and slums."

In connection with church extension the report says that an average of one church a day has been added for a generation of time, and that the total money receipts from 1865 to Oct. 31, 1911, including home missions, is $13,522,754.63.

Stirring discussion of the respect of the M. E. church with respect to mission work in so-called Roman Catholic countries was caused at the close of the business session of the general conference of the church here today by the presentation of a resolution by Wm. F. Rice of Santiago, Chile. Mr. Rice, in his talk, after presenting the resolution, dealt with the alleged difficulties, but by order of the conference the resolution itself was withheld from both the church and secular press and an amendment adopted submitting the resolution to a committee of five to be reported on Wednesday.

RAIN WASHES DOWN FRONT GARAGE WALL

Torrential Rain Fall of Sunday Morning Does Serious Damage to Kemmerer Garage Now Under Construction.

Water rushing down East Milwaukee street in a veritable torrent as a result of the heavy rain fall early Sunday morning, undermined and caused the collapse of the front wall of the new Kemmerer garage building now under construction next to the Gazette office.

The water rushing down the hill reached a depth seldom seen at this time of the year. When it struck the material which was piled in the gutter and street, the course was diverted over the sidewalk and was sufficient to wash out the wall, causing it to fall inward. The several supporting pillars were carried down when the basement wall collapsed. The loss in material and time which will be required to rebuild the wall is serious and will handicap Contractor J. H. Burns in completing the building, the work on which was progressing rapidly.

Other damage from the storm in this city and in the surrounding country amounted to the washing down of embankments and gullies and the depositing of sediment on newly seeded fields. The main fall is estimated to have reached two and a half or three feet of time so that gutters and conduits in the city were taxed to their capacity soon after the storm started. The lightning flashes were vivid and the thunder reports loud and continuous, causing some trepidation less buildings in the city be struck. No damage of the kind was reported, however.

The homes of John Maxworthy and Cal Teske on Union street, Beloit, were struck by lightning in the storm Friday night causing some damage, but no one was injured.

FACE BADLY BURNED BY AN EXPLOSION

Andrew Ellison, Farmer Living Near Fulton, Painfully Injured Saturday While Blasting Stumps.

While blasting stumps on his farm near the town of Fulton on Saturday, Andrew Ellison, a farmer, was badly burned about the face and eyes when the powder, with which he was doing the work, exploded before he had time to escape.

Mr. Ellison was trying to light the fuse attached to the explosive with a match, but the wind blew so strong he had considerable difficulty in doing so and gathered a bunch of dry leaves which he set fire to in order to light the fuse. The fuse was lighted before he was aware of it and burning quickly, caused the explosion before Mr. Ellison was able to escape. His face was blackened and his injuries are very painful. It is not thought his injuries will prove serious.

Mrs. Bridget Stearns.

(Special to the Gazette.)
Belle Plaine, Minn., April 25.—Mrs. Bridget Stearns died at her residence on Willow street, April 25, 1912, from illness incident to advanced age.

Mrs. Stearns, whose maiden name was Barrett, was born in County Cork, Ireland, Feb. 1, 1838, and was married for her first husband, Bridget. When quite young she came to America with an elder sister who settled in Norway, Conn. A few years later she moved to Mendota, Wis., and along with her sister she was married to the late Peter Stearns, Sr., who was one of the pioneers of Wisconsin, and whose ancestors settled in England in the eleventh century.

Mr. and Mrs. Stearns were born in the town of which they are living: Richard and Thomas H. Stearns, of Evansville, Wis.; Mrs. Edward Stearns of Le Sueur center, Minn.; and J. E. Stearns of Hollo Plaine, Minn.

The deceased was a kind and loving wife and always worked for the advancement of her family and the community in which she lived.

In 1887, accompanied by her daughter and two youngest sons, she moved to Minneapolis and temporarily settled in Le Sueur county. In 1892 she purchased her residence here and made this place her home until called by death.

She was a true Christian and bore the trials and sorrows of this life with patience and fortitude. When the time came she was ready to leave this world and go to her home in heaven, where sorrow and death can never enter.

The funeral, which was very largely attended, was held at ten o'clock on Saturday morning from the Sacred Heart Catholic church. Rev. Father Heiland celebrated a requiem mass and officiated at the funeral. The interment was in Oak Hill cemetery by the side of her husband, the late Peter Stearns, Jr., who died Dec. 22, 1891.

He was stricken with paralysis the day after last Christmas and little hope was given for his recovery although he lingered for weeks. Mr. Robinson was born at Pike, Wyoming county, New York, Nov. 23, 1846. He came to Janesville with his parents in 1854 and lived with them at their home in the town of Janesville near the old Rock River house. He enlisted in the Eighth Wisconsin volunteer infantry in '65 and served with company C in that regiment until the close of the war.

In April of 1869 he was married to Belle McWhitty at Mt. Morris, Ill., and they lived together at their home in the town of Janesville until Mrs. Robinson passed away a number of years ago. Mr. Robinson was well known in this city and has a large circle of friends here.

He leaves one daughter and three sons: Mrs. Harry E. Look, 323 Pearl street, of this city; Clarence M. Robinson, of Oakbrook; Forrest L. and Frank Robinson, of the town of Janesville. He also leaves one brother, Judson Robinson of the town of Janesville.

Funeral services will be held from the home of his daughter on Pearl street Wednesday afternoon at half past two o'clock.

PECULIAR QUESTION IN GARNISHEE SUIT

Defendant Denies Having Represented Certain Woman to be His Wife or Promising to Pay Her Board.

Whether John Erdman represented to Mrs. Margaret Walrath and other persons that certain woman was his wife was the strange issue raised in the case of Mrs. Walrath versus Erdman, tried before Justice Lang in the Municipal court this afternoon. Suit is brought by Mrs. Walrath to recover the sum of $50.28 which she alleges Erdman owes her for the board and lodging of a woman introduced by him to her as Mrs. Erdman, from July 11, 1911, to October 16 of the same year. She further alleges that Erdman promised to pay her for such board and lodging and that he had brought to part of it. Attorney Dougherty appeared for the plaintiff and Attorney J. L. Fisher for the defendant, and the case was tried before a panel of five jurors. A number of witnesses were called and the parties to the suit, including the alleged Mrs. Erdman, were all in court.

Attorney Dougherty in introducing the case to the court, declared that the sole issue was the alleged agreement rather than the identity of the alleged Mrs. Erdman, and declared that he would attempt to prove that the defendant recognized her as his wife.

Attorney Fisher made no opening announcement and the defendant was at once called to the stand. He denied all the allegations in the complaint and claimed that he had been in the city but three or four times and had never spent the night there. He denied that the woman was his wife, that he ever wrote letters addressed to Mrs. Erdman, recognized her as such, or contracted debts in her name.

William Dulla was the next witness called to the stand. In reply to the questions of the plaintiff's attorney he related the circumstances under which he alleged he was introduced to the woman by Mr. Erdman as his wife at the home of Mrs. Walrath. The counsel for the defense attempted to show by the questions that the testimony of Mr. Dulla was biased.

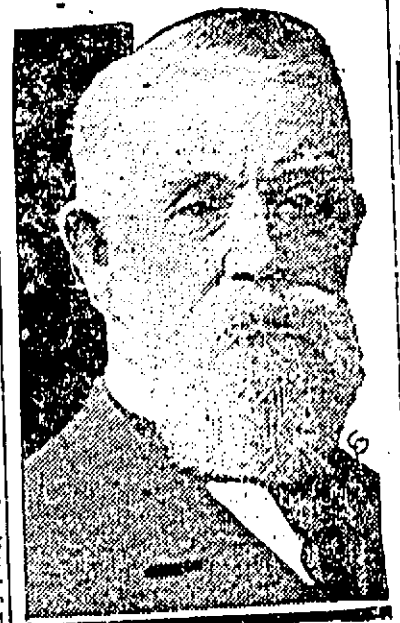

A Mr. Norris, who claimed to have known his home with Mrs. Walrath for a long time, was next called and declared that the alleged Mrs. Erdman at one time asked him to inquire if there was mail for Mrs. John Erdman. He had seen Erdman, he said, at the Walrath home several times.

"The most serious menace to our country," said General Charles H. Grosvenor recently, "is the tendency to construe the nation as a rabble, as a multitude of disorganized men, with a demagogue as a leader. I would rather face a half dozen Congresses than such a condition. And what are you going to do with the demagogue? You can't shoot them. You can't hang them. This is a mere suggestion, but I want you to think of it, and the time to act won't be fifty years hence."

SPORTS

Frank Chance is thinking seriously of donning street clothes and playing the game like Connie Mack does.

The Cub chief was compelled to quit playing by injuries to his head caused by being "batted" with pitched balls. Now he feels that even getting out on the coaching line, in the sunshine, has a disagreeable effect on his head. He is going to be hard for Frank Chance to pass up the playing togs, after having worn them for so many years. He will have the satisfaction of knowing, though, that the first-busiest job in his well-earned career. Members of the Cub outfit are tickled at the way Heide Zimmerman has fitted into the infield hole. Arlie Huffman, who played first for a while himself last season, declares Zim has the makings of a big-league first baseman and that by next year he will be one of the most valuable assets of the Cub machine.

"Look at the way the big fellow hits the ball," enthuses Arlie. "Look how he speeds on grounders. All he needs is a bit of coaching on around balls on the right side of him, and on blocking low throws. Chance can give him this and when Heide masters them there won't be a first baseman in either league who will be his class. He is a tall, rangy youngster, and is fast enough to cover a lot of territory."

Johnny Kilbane, now featherweight champion, isn't taking any chances with his title. Also Atkin, from whom Johnny wrestled the "crown," didn't train any more than he had to, and not as much, frequently. Although Kilbane's ten-round affair with Johnny Dundee in New York is still two weeks off, he has been hard at work for more than a week in Cleveland, doing five miles on the road every morning and putting in a strenuous hour and a half of gym work in the afternoon. It is work, too, as Johnny's manager, Jimmy Dunn, and his sparring partners will testify. The little champion never lets up for a moment.

Things are looking up for Packer McFarland, the Chicago Cub, who is back home looking and feeling $10,000 richer after his New York battle with Matt Wells.

The weight question, always a troublesome one for Packer, has interfered with his earning capacity in the past to a considerable extent. He couldn't make the lightweight limit and he couldn't get the fights. Since he showed up Wells so effectively, however, there seems to be plenty of lightweights who are willing, even anxious to take him on. Packer has become a big card, and there are almost invariably lower's ends, too, in those fat purses. Eddie Murphy and Freddie Walsh are after him, and in Chicago they say he'll be pitted against Wolcott after he has disposed of these two.

If Mayor Hunt happened to retire, Hank O'Day could be elected to his job in Cincinnati by an overwhelming majority. No other manager ever succeeded in keeping the Reds in first place so long since 1893.

PIRATES WIN GAME BY A GOOD MARGIN

Defeat Athletics in First Game of Season by 14 to 8 Score at Athletic Park Sunday.

The Janesville Pirates won their first game of the season yesterday afternoon when they pounded out eighteen hits for fourteen runs against the Athletics who were credited with only eight tallies.

Both teams were handicapped at first on account of the condition of the diamond at Athletic park where the contest was staged. The Pirates were quick to solve O'Hara's curves and every man in the team was credited with at least one bingle. Buggs for the Pirates was wild at the opening innings but when he found the plate he held the Athletics to eight scattering hits. The game was close up to the fourth inning and for a time the score was tied. The Pirates came in strong with the stick, however, and rapidly outdistanced the Athletics. The score followed:

EXPECT BIG CROWD AT MATCH TONIGHT

Fine Array of Boxing Talent Will Contest at Auditorium Building This Evening.

With everything in readiness for the big boxing match at the auditorium building this evening, prospects are good for the largest attendance of the year attracted by the flattering array of boxing talent which has been secured by Matchmaker Hockett of the Janesville Athletic club. Milwaukee will have a delegation here to back their contestants, Billy Morehead who meets Harry Slinger of Chicago, in the ten-round final, and Jack Nearing who meets Phil Harrison of Chicago, in the semi-final. These two bouts promise to be fast and keenly contested. Madison and Belvidere delegations will be on hand to see the match be-twice Floyd (Kid) De Munn of the latter city and Jack Craft of the former in an eight round go at 145 pounds.

The first preliminary will be between Kid Sharkey of Janesville and Ted Young of Milwaukee, in a six round engagement. As an added attraction there will be the exhibition bout between Jimmy Walsh, the champion lightweight man of England and a Milwaukee boxer. The card tonight demonstrates that the management has left no detail undone to make this event the best of the season. Jack Dougherty of Madison will officiate as referee.

BELOIT TEAM WINS IN TWELFTH INNING

Janesville Team Gives National Aggregation a Hard Run to Win by 5 to 4 Score Sunday Afternoon.

Handicapped by a muddy diamond and seriously crippled by the non-appearance of several of the principal players, the Janesville baseball team made an excellent showing, nevertheless, in their game with the Beloit Nationals at Yost park yesterday afternoon. It was a twelve inning contest which ended with a 5 to 4 score in favor of the Beloit bats.

Janesville's showing was remarkable considering the fact that three or four of the strongest men failed to fill the positions and that substitutes little acquainted with the game were called to the rescue. Chamberlain, a new recruit, was in the pitcher's box and did stellar work. He held the opponents to eight hits in the entire twelve innings and added to his glory by striking out ten men. Manager Clarke considers him a "find" and Chamberlain will be a permanent member of the local team for the season. Miller behind the bat for Janesville also did great work. It was a new position for him, but owing to the abbreviated condition of the team he volunteered his services in this responsible position with a new man in the box. He played the twelve innings without an error, however, and secured a score with a home run hit, demonstrating his ability with the stick.

Beloit played a good game but proved no better than the local team even in its poor condition yesterday. Martin pitched for Beloit for nine innings in which he struck out six men. He was relieved by Baukh in the tenth, who sent away five Janesville men by the strike-out route. The score yesterday is as follows:

	R.	H.	E.
Janesville	5	10	5
Beloit	4	10	5

COMMERCIAL LEAGUE FANS TO GET BUSY

Question of Local League Games Being Agitated—Officers to Meet Soon and Decide Time to Start.

Four members of the commercial league have already signified their willingness to start the games at once and agreed to get their teams to work, while two or three others will be ready in a week or so. A meeting of the officers of the league will probably take place the first of the week and something definite will be decided concerning the league at that time. Practically all of the members of the league have expressed their desire to continue it this summer and some of these concerns which were not able to start a team last year for various reasons will make a desperate effort to put out one soon so that competition is expected to be even stronger than it was last year. Most of the factorless who have been giving the employees half holidays on Saturday afternoons have started already and so they may be able to have the games at once. A scrub game is being planned for next Saturday.

MAKING GOOD.

Much fear was expressed, when the city decided to adopt the commission plan of government, that good men could not be found to fill the office of mayor and councilmen, and in spite of the fact that everybody proposed to vote for good men the impression prevailed, to large extent, that the city was more than likely to fall into the hands of an incompetent board.

All fear was dispelled, however, when the result of the primary election was known, for the six successful candidates were all good men, and any of them would have been acceptable to the taxpayers and voters. The three men finally elected are all good men, and while less than a month has expired since they assumed office, the work already outlined and in process satisfies the most skeptical that the city made no mistake in adopting the plan or selecting the men to carry it out.

The bane of politics, which has long cursed the city government, no longer exists, and the new administration is free from ward obligations or political entanglements of any sort. Ordinances which have long been dead letters are brought to the surface and inspired with new life, and while their enforcement may seem a hardship to the men whose interests are directly affected, it is well to remember that laws are created for the benefit and protection of all the people.

The saloon has as much right to exist in Janesville as the grocery, because the law grants the privilege, and public sentiment endorses it, but with the right goes the regulation, which is a vital part of the agreement. The fact that this business is surrounded with regulations, which other lines of business do not require, is no argument in favor of non-enforcement, for while the traffic is legally legitimate it affects the morals of a community, and public safety demands moral protection.

In many states, the screen, which shields from public view the patrons of the saloon, is a thing of the past, and the business is conducted as openly as all other lines of business. Public sentiment does not yet demand this in Janesville, but the commission is right in believing that it does demand that screens be removed after closing hours and on Sunday, and there is no reason why any saloon man should object, if he is a law-abiding citizen.

The work of the new administration is already being felt along other lines, and before the year closes, the city will show improvements in many directions. The people have elected three good men to serve them, and if they will stand by them, much will be accomplished in the way of moral and business reform.

WHAT OF BRYAN?

The impression prevails to quite an extent in New York City that Bryan will capture the Baltimore convention, and lead the democratic forces in the next campaign. Stranger things have happened, and the Nebraska statesman will bear watching. Bryan is recognized as the best orator and one of the best politicians in the country. While the democratic party is badly disorganized he has a personal following second to no man in the country, and this constituency comes nearer to being an organization than anything within the ranks of the party.

If you have watched his course during the pre-convention campaign, you have discovered that he has been busily engaged in "playing both ends against the middle," and with a good deal of success. He has encouraged candidates to come into the field and has had a good word for all of them except Wilson—the only man he feared. Wilson has now practically eliminated himself and Harmon seems to be out of the running, but both have strength enough to upset the two-thirds majority necessary to nominate, while a dark horse is already being discussed in Kern of Indiana.

Bryan will be a prominent character in the convention and will have much to do with the platform adopted. The candidates all want his support, and when the deadlock becomes monotonous, some enthusiastic admirer will spring Bryan's name on the convention, as a compromise candidate. This is the theory advanced, and Bryan is in a receptive mood.

If this should occur, and Taft should receive the republican nomination, as he is likely to, there would be no question about republican success. The conservative democracy, however, has no objection to Bryan. Should Roosevelt succeed, conditions would be different, as both men are radical and many people would regard it as a choice between two evils. The Colonel's bark, however, is worse than his bite, and he made a good record as president.

The colored brother in the South represents nothing in the way of party strength, but he is likely to hold the balance of power in the republican national convention, and he can always be counted on to support the administration. Should Taft force his nomination with this sort of support it will add nothing to his strength in November. The apportionment in the South should be changed to meet conditions.

The Spartanburg, South Carolina Herald of May 2nd, contains a story of how the Methodist people of that city built a church complete, the day before, and dedicated it in the evening with an audience of eight hundred. The work of one hundred and fifty skilled mechanics was donated and "Bethel church" became a reality between six o'clock in the morning and seven in the evening, including pews and carpets and complete furnishing.

The city of Chicago has been without newspapers for the past few days and all because the officers refused to hire two men to do one man's work. This demand on the part of labor may seem all right from a union standpoint, but the principle is wrong. The Hearst presses, where the trouble originated, were so crowded with men that they were in each other's way. When an attempt was made to reduce the force, they all quit, and called it a "lock-out," but it is a strike, pure and simple. The papers are in the right and should win.

What the state of Wisconsin needs is a radical change in state administration. The extra session of the state legislature confirms the belief that the income tax and all other reform measures will stand, and that the university will continue to be a controlling influence so long as radicalism is in the saddle. If the democrats are wise they will organize a conservative party and rescue the state from the political machine which now controls it.

The Boy Scout movement is receiving the attention which it deserves, and the good work should go on until it reaches every boy in the city. It is worth something to save the remnant of a life by reforming the man in the gutter, but it is worth vastly more to save the boy, and this is what the scout work does. The playground is a close second, and entitled to every encouragement.

The preferential primary, so much discussed of late, is as much of a farce as any other primary election. The fight between Taft and Roosevelt in Massachusetts last week only brought out fifty per cent of the republican vote, while eighty per cent of the democrats cast no little about results that they stayed at home. That may be representative government, if it is, "God save the mark."

The loss of the Titanic and the tragedy connected with it was a climax to recklessness which was doubtless needed to bring the world to its senses. Experience is the most effective teacher, and ocean travel will be safer for many years to come because of the lesson so dearly bought.

The city shows the effects of a general clean-up and the people are to be congratulated for the spirit with which they entered into the movement.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By Roy K. Moulton.

At The Baltimore Convention.
The great Democratic national convention settled down and with grim determination to listen to the non-hating speeches.

"Alabama" called the clerk.
A delegate from Mobile arose and after a pyrotechnic fever lasting the better part of an hour he closed as follows:

"It is now my honor and pleasure to present to you the name of our peerless leader, William Randolph Taft."

"What's that?" demanded the chairman bringing his gravel down sharply on the ineffectual cheer or two.

"I beg your pardon," said the gentleman from Alabama. "I meant to say William Jennings Hearst."

"Put him out," yelled a delegate from New York.

"William Howard Bryan," persisted the speaker.

"Chicago again," cried a delegate from California.

"William Jennings Jennings," stammered the speaker, desperately, the "William Randolph Jennings."

"You're drunk, sit down," said the chairman.

"I'll not sit down," declared the speaker, I came here to nominate William Howard Bryan of Ohio, and I'm going to do it if it takes all day. I now have the honor and pleasure to present to you the name of our peerless leader, William Jennings Randolph Howard," he said desperately, but hopefully, "I mean William Randolph Bryan—Big Bill Bryan of Ohio."

The chairman quoted the tumult by shouting: "If the gentleman from Alabama means William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska, we will consider his speech concluded. If not will hand him over to the police."

"That's the name," yelled the Alabama delegate happily. I knew it was something like that. Hurrah for our next president.

"Huh, he's talking about Taft, again," whispered one of the other delegates to his seatmate. "Let's get out as quietly as possible."

The gentleman from Alabama was carried, struggling from the auditorium. The heat of Baltimore had got in its deadly work and the last heard from him was a jumble of William Randolph, Howard and Jennings.

They Couldn't Help It.

A Bit of Philosophy:

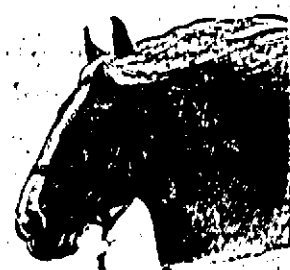

Once there was an old rag peddler driving along a country road. A row of bells tied to a strap and stretched across the top of the wagon were making a terrible din, as the wagon bumped along over the ruts.

An old philosopher stopped him and said: "My good man, why this fearful noise? You know there is not a house within miles of here."

"I really don't know," replied the peddler. "Never gave it a thought. So I just let them ring."

The philosopher mused: "It's very peculiar. The world is full of people who go through life making a great noise without any result—doing things day in and day out, not knowing why they do them or having any motive for making a great noise."

Some stores, like the peddler, make a terrible din without any result—herald this and that as a bargain with great eclat and tom-tom accompaniments and then blame it to hard times or the weather because they are not overrun with patronage.

HOW UNCLE SAM HAS TO FIGURE WEATHER

PAYS MILLION AND HALF YEARLY FOR THIS BUREAU ALONE.

MAP IS LIKE A PUZZLE

Observations Taken Each Morning at Eight in Two Hundred Different Places.

When it is pointed out that the weather bureau costs the government about $1,600,000 a year, the question often arises as to just what use this department is to the government. "What do the maps mean?" and "Why do they make 'em look like a bunch of Egyptian hieroglyphics?" are questions heard on every side.

There are any number of readers of the Gazette who consult the map in an effort to determine what the prediction is, and out of this number those who are informed as to how the forecasts are made are in the minority.

Map Generally a Puzzle.

They know that the forecasts are made by the weather bureau, and that the bureau issues a map, but for them to decipher the map and attempt to "dope" out whether it is going to rain or snow they are as helpless as an American schoolboy with a copy of the Chinese constitution. They can't figure out the tortuous curves or the strange circles or dotted lines, and yet these, once explained, are simple to decipher.

Even Prof. Willis L. Moore, head of the weather bureau, will admit that forecasting is a plain, common sense business carried on in a plain common sense manner, despite the apparent mystery.

At 8 o'clock every morning some 200 men about the country, from Maine to Lower California and from Texas to Alaska, are reduced to cipher and wired to various cities in the United States, where the Bureau of Temperature, Rainfall, Pressure, Wind Velocity and other atmospheric conditions are entered on the map. When this work is completed, the experienced forecaster begins to see things.

What the Lines Mean.

For example, the isothermal line of 40 degrees, instead of running east and west across the country, dips at a perilous angle from New York to Texas, while the 20 and 30 lines to the westward follow suit. This means colder weather from Mississippi valley to the Atlantic coast, and the forecaster is prepared for the public accordingly. The isobars are lines connecting places having the same air pressure, and when they indicate in concentric circles over Tennessee and Kentucky, the forecaster knows where the storm centers. He has further evidence in the high winds and rain in the surrounding territory. If the storm hangs over Louisiana the preceding day, he is able to add to the temperature forecast a suitable prediction regarding the winds by tracing its path and judging the extent of the country through which its influence will be felt.

The weather man will tell you that he like the map on the head line times out of ten, and that is "some record." How long it will be before they will be always right is a matter of conjecture. For instance, Pittsburgh and Allegheny form practically the same metropolis. Yet it can be shown that an unbroken record of 100 consecutive correct forecasts for Pittsburgh resulted in only 95 per cent. of correct forecasts for Allegheny.

Not Always Infallible.

It is difficult to measure the mileage of rain and rainstorms often are muddled in their behavior, standing stock still and drenching the earth when, according to all indications, they should be moving. Again they just lie down and die.

There are many unknown conditions in connection with a storm which make the work of predicting extremely hard. Until all these conditions are solved by the forecaster, it necessarily follows that their findings cannot always be infallible.

Weather forecasting by scientific methods is of comparatively recent times, dating back not further than Benjamin Franklin's day for the discovery of the principles of storm movement, which, in fact, were not put to practical use until the decades immediately preceding the Civil war. Franklin was a pioneer in the field, and his investigations of a storm that moved up the Atlantic at a time when he and his scientific friends were preparing to study a lunar eclipse virtually laid the foundations for rational forecasting.

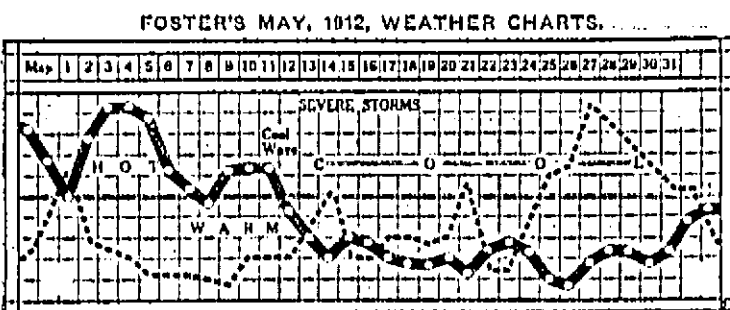

Franklin was prevented from making observations at Philadelphia by a northeast storm, from which he surmised that his colleagues in New England were also unsuccessful. Much to his surprise he learned later that they had had clear weather and calm skies. Further correspondence with friends in the south developed the paradox that northwest storms move from the southwest.

Divided Into Six Districts.

Of the $1,600,000 spent annually by the weather department $200,000 goes to telegraphing the observations, printing the maps and issuing warnings. Men of prominence and who have long trained in their line give the forecasts to the country.

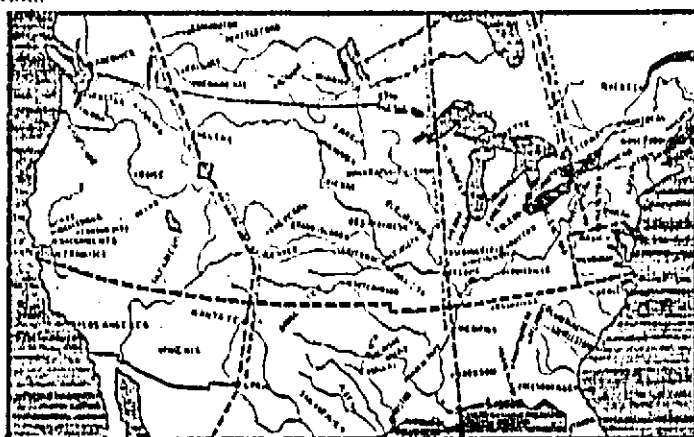

The United States is divided into six forecast districts, with headquarters at Chicago, Washington, New Orleans, Denver, San Francisco and Portland, Ore. At each of these stations the forecaster sends out the daily forecast and frost, cold wave and storm warnings for his territory. The Chicago district comprises the upper Mississippi valley and the north-west; the New Orleans district, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma; the Denver district, Utah, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona; the San Francisco district, California and Nevada; and the Portland district, Washington, Oregon and Idaho.

For the remaining portion of the country forecasts are issued from Washington to population centers and then sent to 2300 distributing points, and from there are disseminated by telephone, telegraph or mail. Nearly 225,000 addresses are reached by mail.

May temperatures will average from about to above normal east of the Mississippi and Red River of the North and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers; also about East Gulf, Florida, Cuba and North Pacific Slope. Elsewhere from about to below normal. Precipitation to the warm wave that will cross continent May 7 to 11 and during its progress, temperatures will average unusually high and after that unusually low. Severe storms May 12 to 18. Cold wave May 19 to 24. Rainfall of May will be generally deficient, but in about one-fourth of the various sections it will be from about to above normal. Most rainfall during five days centering on disturbances that will cross continent April 29 to May 3, May 12 to 16, 19 to 23, and particularly 25 to 29.

In above chart the treble line represents normal temperatures and rainfall. The heavy line with round white spots is temperature forecast. Where it goes above treble line temperatures are expected to be higher. Where it goes below treble line temperatures will be lower. The broken zigzag line is rainfall forecast. As it goes higher indicates greater probability of rain and where it goes lower the reverse. Dates are for Meridian 90. Count one or two days earlier for West of that line and as much later for East of it. Rainfall forecasts are not intended for districts where I have predicted less than usual rain.

Broken lines separate May into eight weather districts named North Pacific Slope, South Pacific Slope, Northwest, Southwest, Lake, Southeast, Northeast, and Washington. Address Foster's Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C.

each day, and 3,500,000 rural residents receive them daily by telephone.

Advance Warnings Save Much.

The forecasts are the main good derived from the weather bureau, although it has other fields of usefulness. Its most important work is in the advance notice of storms, frosts and decided changes in temperature that result in the most good for the people. Statistics kept at the headquarters show that one single storm warning kept vessels with cargoes valued at more than $50,000,000 in port until the "blow" was over. For valuable property valued at $2,500,000 was saved by one warning of a storm, while orange crops in Florida worth $100,000 were saved by an advance "tip" on a frost.

As a result of warnings issued a week in advance, livestock, horses and other valuables were removed from places along the lower Mississippi river a week in advance of terrible floods. The saving this time was estimated at nearly $15,000,000 in the inundated region.

In the spring months a Mississippi river flood is carefully followed by the bureau, and warnings posted accordingly, thus saving not only property but life.

SENATOR PENROSE MAY LOSE HIS JOB

Dolis Penrose.

The decisive defeat of Dolis Penrose in the recent Pennsylvania State Republican convention may mean that the people of the Keystone State are getting ready to ask their senator to step down and out at the close of his present term on March 3, 1915. Penrose was elected to the Senate in 1907, and has worn the toga ever since that time. He is regarded as a great pillar of the administration at Washington, and with the recent primaries, particularly speaking he carried Pennsylvania in his pocket.

Gurney Refrigerators

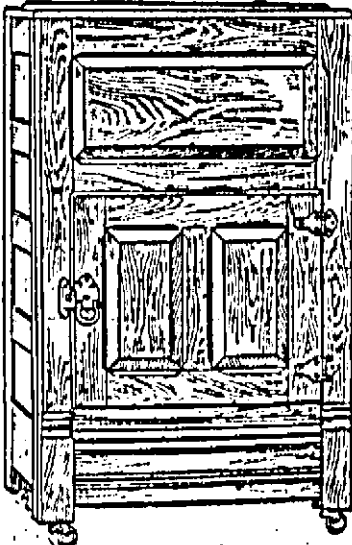

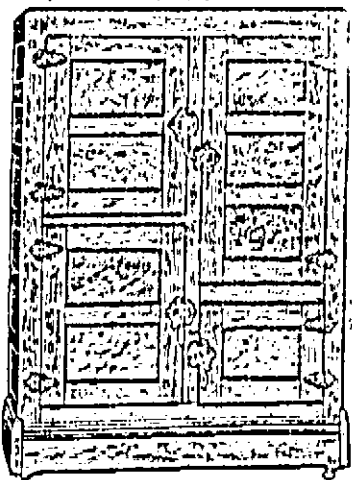

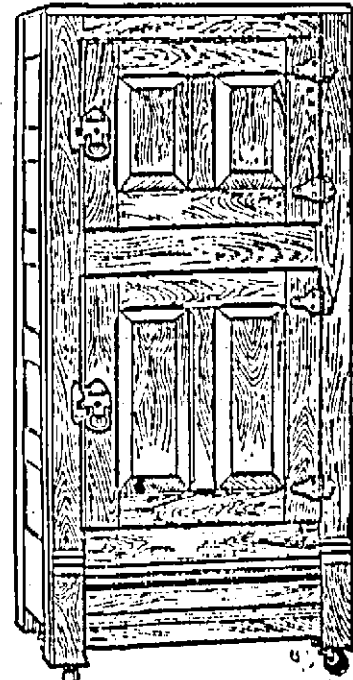

Refrigerators With Perfect and Free Circulation of Air

The experience in the manufacture of refrigerators is fast teaching the manufacturers of this line of goods that, next to perfect construction and insulation, the most important point to be observed is to so construct a refrigerator that perfect and free circulation can be secured. Nature's law that warm air will rise and cold air will fall, is simple and is to be observed in the construction of refrigerators by giving large and free flue capacity between the provision compartments and the ice-chamber. This requirement is fully observed in the Gurney Line of Refrigerators.

The warm air from the provision chamber rises, passes through the end flue and directly across the ice compartment escaping to the provision chamber at the lowest point, unobstructed by ice or ice rack, thus constantly supplying the provision chamber with pure, dry, cold air.

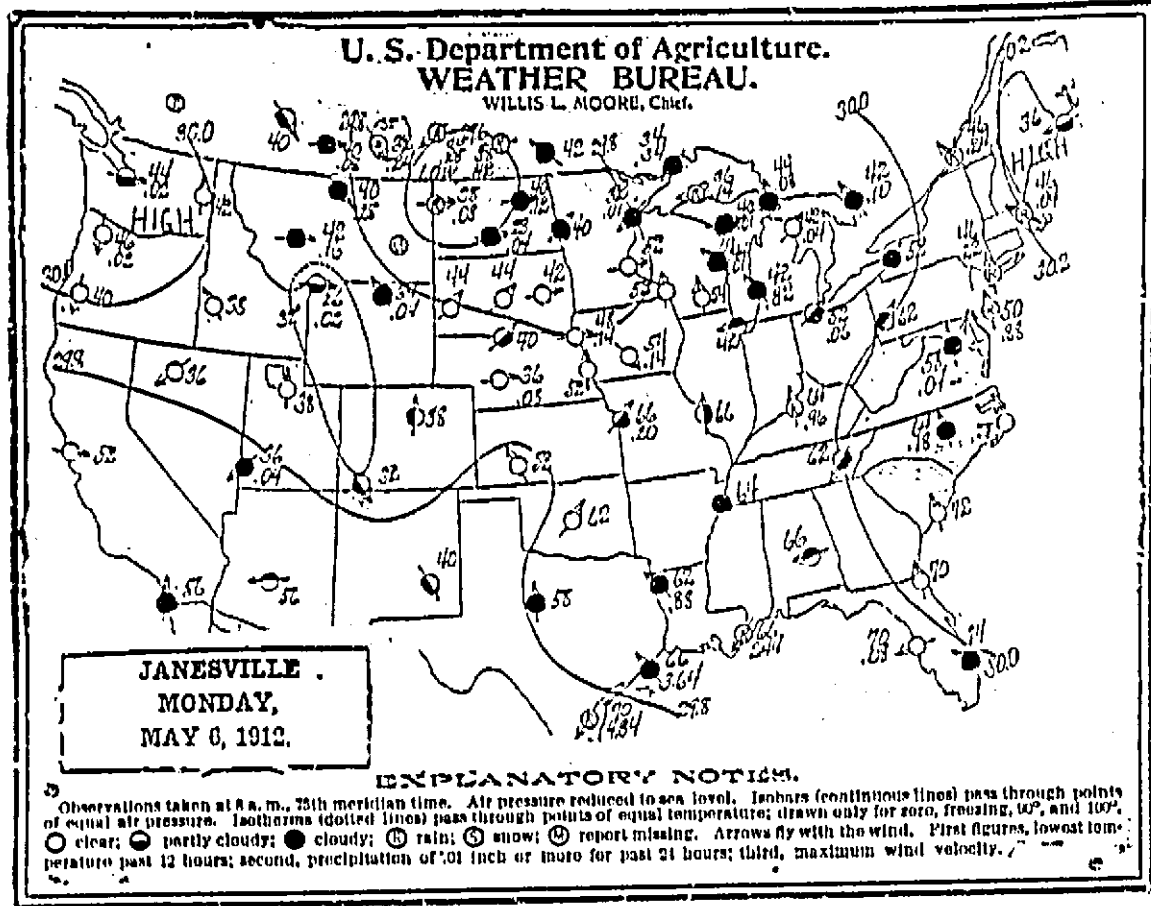

The Prominent Features of Gurney Construction Are:

- Five walls.
- Raised Panels.
- Made of Kiln-dried Hardwood, golden oak finish of best filler, shellac and coach varnish.
- Fancy overlapping doors, special clamp for double doors, inodorously rosin-tized sheathing, fancy copper locks and hinges of special design.
- Best spring steel self-retaining casters with apple wood wheel, readily removed or replaced at will, patent steel floor plate, preventing splitting of legs, full zinc lined.
- Sliding, adjustable tin-lined wire shelves, no inside wood exposed, removable galvanized ice rack, removable waste pipe with improved trap.
- And the cost is small.

In this vicinity the weather will probably continue fair tonight and Tuesday. There will not be much change in temperature.

Leading Part in Production of
"Drifting" at Myers
Theatre.

At the Myers theatre this evening Miss Mildred Doty of this city, who has been studying in preparation for the theatrical profession in the School of Acting of the Dush Temple Conservatory, will appear in the leading role in the four-act play, "Drifting." The other members of the company are also from the Dush Temple school, and the play is staged under the direction of Edward Dvorak, director of the school. Miss Doty commenced her studies in the school last fall. She has shown such ability and talent in the work, that Mr. Dvorak has given her the leading part in this production. The play itself is a clever production, and aside from the interest taken in it because of Miss Doty's appearance here, is very worthy. It is a drama of modern life. Miss Doty will play the part of Helen Mantion.

"BEVERLY."

Miss Eleanor Woodruff who plays Beverly Calhoun, the charming heroine of "Beverly," is perhaps the youngest leading lady in America in so far as years are concerned, who is playing a star part, but as she made her debut playing child parts with a prominent San Francisco stock company, she is a thoroughly experienced and convincing actress. Miss Woodruff imparts to the role of "Beverly" the same girlish charm and ingenuousness so marked in her portrayal of the eldest Grendel with Cyril Scott.

In the original New York production of "The Prince Chap," Mr. Lawrence Evans as Prince Danton, who makes a handsome young actor, who is well known to the majority of patrons of the better class of attractions having played leading roles with the Whitefield for six years, and for the past two seasons a popular star in the romantic drama. No matter how cleverly contrived or entertaining a play may be, nor how much money may have been spent upon its scenic and costume equipment, if the play is not well cast, or in other words, if the actors portraying the different parts are not particularly adapted to the roles, a good performance is impossible. More especially so is this of a dramatized novel, whose nearly everyone who has read the book has formed a mental portrait of the characters. Fully realizing this Messrs. A. E. Delanator and William Norris in selecting their cast for George Barr McCutcheon's "Beverly," to be presented at the Myers Theatre, Saturday, May 11, matinee and evening, have exercised unusual care with the result that each of the many characters in the play bear the impression of having stepped out of the story on to the stage. Davidson Clark, who plays General Marlans, has been prominently identified with all of the famous dramatic stars for a number of years, including Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Mantell and Mr. Frederick Warde. Miss Edith Herwyn, who plays Princess Yelva, is a former member of David Belasco's "Sweet Kitty Bellairs" company and played a prominent role in "The Road to Yesterday," Hazel Harrow, the Princess Candace, was formerly ingenue with Annie Russell and Mrs. Fiske. Sixteen other well known artists are included in the cast.

AMBASSADOR BACON
HONORED BY FRANCE

Government and Private Organizations Give Farewell Reception.
Other European News.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Paris, May 6.—How, if any ambassadors to France have been paid the honors which come to Robert Bacon in connection with his departure after a most successful service as representative of the United States. Government and private organizations of French people offered a series of dinners and receptions to Mr. and Mrs. Bacon, and at innumerable functions was expressed the sincere regret of the French people that the Ambassador should have retired. The fact that Mr. Bacon has been elected a Fellow of Harvard University is greatly appreciated here, and incidentally has led to a renewed interest in Harvard University. This is so, not only because of Mr. Bacon's position there, but as well because of the new official relations between Harvard and the Sorbonne growing out of the arrangement for additional exchange professors every year between the two universities.

Colonel Bally-Banachard, first secretary of the embassy, who has left to go to Tokyo, also received many expressions of regret, for during his long tenure of office in Paris he has won a warm place in the hearts of the French people. Among his intimates the news of his transfer was received with something akin to consternation, for Colonel Banachard had come to be regarded as a permanent member of the American Embassy. For twenty-seven years he has served the American State Department in Paris and elsewhere on the Continent. Like Henry Villard, his predecessor in the office of first secretary, Colonel Banachard's value to the State Department was enhanced by his intimate knowledge of French.
A poor workman out of employment, carrying an old violin, entered a shop near Geneva recently and offered the instrument for sale, stating that he and his family were impoverished. A young clerk from a sense of pity bought the violin for two dollars, and after having it repaired, began to play upon it.
He was surprised at the melody. When a musician to whom he had shown it offered him $20 he became suspicious and took the violin to an expert, who declared it to be an Amati and that it was worth a large sum of money. A few days later Mr. Ernest Schilling, a well known American musician who lives near Geneva, offered the clerk $4,000 for the violin, but the negotiations have not yet been concluded. The clerk, on his part, intends to make a generous return to the workman from whom he bought the instrument.

The Graduate and Her Vocation

IN one sense, this age might be called the Era of Helpfulness, so many movements are on foot to help every one to a fuller and happier life.

And in this the graduate shares, for the work that has come to her aid is the vocational guidance effort that is spreading so generally over the country.

And it is doubtful if any finer work is being done. For no one can calculate the ill results that follow from round pegs being fitted into square holes. It is one of those things that not only causes actual and active disastrous results, but it brings an anguish of spirit often hidden from the eyes, but none the less poignant and none the less tragic in its results.

For, with all the knowledge that has been crammed into her head, the graduate has seldom been taught how to solve the problem, "What shall I do with my life to use it to the best purpose? What am I best fitted to do?" She may be able to solve a problem of trigonometry, she can perhaps tell you the speed of light vibrations; but whether she ought to make dresses or write advertisements to earn a living, whether she is really gifted by nature to paint a picture or whether her forte is welfare work, she is in complete ignorance. As a result, in choosing her life-work, she follows a whim, takes up something haphazard, or accepts whatever fate or chance thrusts upon her. And in time, she wakes up to find she is not fitted for her work physically or mentally, that her real tastes and abilities lie elsewhere, that her heart is not in what she is doing.

But vocational guidance is remedying this, and is helping to bring about that happy condition described by Carlyle, "Blessed is the man who has found his work." For it is helping the graduate to find her work. In many high schools now there is a teacher or a committee of teachers to help students in deciding not only for what vocation they are fit, but also how to enter it. Several grammar schools also provide such help.

But the girl who is not so fortunate as to have studied at one of these schools is not without help. Many books and pamphlets are published on the subject which give actual help, not merely theories. And there are many enthusiastic workers ready to aid those who want advice.

Houston was the pioneer in the work, but the movement is now country-wide, and the Department of Commerce and Labor has just issued a report on vocational guidance throughout the country.

So the graduate, standing on the threshold of her career, and wondering perplexedly what she shall do, should take advantage of this vocational guidance. She should study herself scientifically, not emotionally. She should go about finding out what her life-work is, in an critical, keen and cold-blooded fashion as she experiments on a subject in a laboratory test. She should make use of the tables, the data, the searching inquiry of the vocational examinations. She may be surprised at the creature she comes forth. She may not know herself, though rather, she will know herself, but she may find that she didn't know herself before. But the person within her that the vocational problem discovers will be her real self. And the work that is pointed out for this real self to do, will be the work she is fitted to do, the work she will succeed in, the work she will be happy in. So, wise is the girl who takes advantage of the assistance offered in this important matter.

Heart and Home Problems

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am nineteen years of age, and five feet tall and weigh one hundred and thirty pounds. Is my weight right for my height? (2) I go with one young man who objects to my going out with other young men. He does not go with other girls. Do you think that he loves me? (3) Do you think it is right to quit a steady fellow for a fellow who likes better?

WHITE ROSE: (1) Your weight is twenty or thirty pounds too much for your height and age. (2) If he is the sort of a young man who could attract other girls and still goes with no other but you, he probably loves you. (3) Yes, if you do not intend ever to go back to the farm.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Do you think it would be right for me to marry a man whom I like but do not love, although he loves me, and says if I do not marry him he will commit suicide. (2) Do you think a fellow loves me if he pays a great deal of attention to me, and bothers about me every time he sees me, although he pays a lot of attention to other girls and bothers about them? (3) Do you think a girl should meet a fellow if he once disapproves her, making the excuse that he is sick? (4) What would you think of a man who would want a girl to burn all his letters to her?

RED ROSE: (1) No, it would be far from right to marry a man you do not love, especially one who makes the threat of suicide. If you refuse him he will soon find consolation in a second choice. (2) Such a man is unusually a flirt, and does not think any more of one girl than another. The less you have to do with such a man the better. (3) A girl ought not to receive a young man in the first place whose excuse she could not believe. (4) I should be distrustful of him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Can you tell me what will remove grease spots from light tan shoes? (2) What can I use on my hair to make it grow long and thick? (3) I am only fifteen years of age and do not keep company with young men. Is it proper for me to attend parties, socials and the like with my cousin?

SUNBEAM: (1) Saturate some flour with gasoline and rub on the spots. (2) Keep the scalp in a healthy condition by massage, and use a reliable hair tonic. The following formula is good: One quart; table salt, two ounces; castor oil, one quart; tincture of camellides, one dram. Rub into scalp several times a week. (3) Your cousin should be a suitable escort.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am desirous of giving a hard time party soon, and as I have never given such party before, wish you would tell me how to entertain, giving me a few games.

ANXIOUS: I have the guests dress in hard time costumes, and patched suits or overalls. For entertainment any of the old-fashioned games that afford amusement would be good. It would be fun to guess the identity of the guests from their baby pictures. Have all the baby pictures numbered and placed in a row, and give each guest a paper and pencil. A prize might be given the winner. You might also place a number of articles, say fifty or a hundred, on a table in another room and allow the guests to enter and look at them for one minute, then return and write down lists of the articles from memory. Then again, you could have a number of bottles, each numbered and containing a different odor, such as cinnamon, nutmeg, vanilla, saffron, etc., all of which could distinguish the most. The answers should be written in the order of the numbers on the bottles.

BREADS.

For those living in the country or small towns, where fresh compressed yeast cake is not obtainable, the following method of making bread will be found most satisfying. In fact it is used by many city households, who prefer it to any other:

Cook six medium-sized potatoes in water to cover; mash and strain the potato and water in which it was cooked over four tablespoonsful of flour, four tablespoonsful of sugar, a tablespoonful of salt. Steep a packed tablespoonful of hops in a cup of water; pour this water over the other ingredients, add a quart of water, and when the mixture is lukewarm add a yeast cake that has been softened in a little water. The yeast is now ready for bread.

About two hours before the bread is needed, prepare the sponge, use a cup of cup and a half of the yeast mixture, adding more salt and some shortening, with flour enough to knead as soft as it can be handled. Knead ten minutes, make into loaves or buns and when light bake without further kneading.

This bread is so simple to make, so good in flavor and one can prepare it on short notice, that every housewife should keep some of the yeast on hand.

Graham Bread.—Take three cups of graham flour, two cups of sour milk, two tablespoonsful of soda, two-thirds of a cup of dark brown sugar, a pinch of salt. Mix all together and bake one hour in a slow oven.

Brown Bread.—Three cups of graham flour, two of white flour and one of cornmeal, a half cup of sugar, a teaspoonful of soda, two tablespoonsful of salt, two cups each of warmed sweet milk and two of water; add a compressed yeast cake, beat well, put in this at night, cover air tight. Bake in the morning one hour. This makes two loaves.

DAILY DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN

Food Specialist

EAT SPARINGLY WHEN UNDER STRAIN.

Weston's great walking feats, known to every newspaper reader, are a good example of the requirements of physical endurance. His diet was far from ideal, but the one great lesson, constantly taught, was that if a man is to do his best work he must eat only enough to furnish heat, energy and bodily waste. If he is to win in a contest, he must eat sparingly and lose in weight. Digestion and elimination are work of a severe kind, and the more he saves in that department, the more he will have to spend in muscular and mental work.

Several years ago I published in one of the medical journals the result of some experiments made in "A Tramp's Diet," showing that the best walking was done when only enough food was taken to prevent actual hunger and that a gradual elimination of meat was found to steadily increase the mileage walked. This corresponds with the results of the endurance tests made by Prof. Chittenden and Fisher of Yale and with all the results in the great walking contests in Germany, England and America.

Provide Against Forgery.

The forgery of all bank notes is quickly detected, because of secret marks, which are constantly being changed. They are visible only under the microscope.

Too Tenuous.

Hints on Cleaning the Sink

Every sink should be provided with a three-cornered sieve made by covering a metal frame with very fine netting. When water is thrown into the sink it should be turned into this sieve, preventing the solid matter from getting into the pipes and causing trouble. Each time the dishes are washed the sink should be carefully cleaned. The quickest way is to dissolve a teaspoonful of Gold Dust washing powder in hot water, rinse every portion of the sink with the Gold Dust solution, pouring some of the hot soda down the pipe to loosen the grease that may have gathered in the trap.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

MOTHER'S DAY.

MOST all of the other beautiful things in life come by twos and threes, by dozens and hundreds: Plenty of stars, roses, sunsets, rainbows, brothers and sisters, aunts and cousins—but only one mother in all the wide world. —Kate Douglas Wiggin.

Next Sunday there will take place the fourth celebration of a new international holiday. In all the calendar, there are but two other international holidays, and yet this most remarkable holiday was created with a single postage stamp, according to the story of its founder, Miss Anna Jarvis.

Five years ago, Miss Jarvis used this epoch-making postage stamp to carry a notice to a Church paper. This notice asked for the observance of the second Sunday in May as "Mother's Day," and requested that every son and daughter who wished to honor motherhood should wear a white carnation on that day.

The next year that same notice was inserted in a Philadelphia paper and copied by other newspapers all over the country. The result was that the new holiday became at once so popular that last year Mother's Day was observed, not only in every nook and corner of our own country, but also in Europe, in parts of China, Japan, Africa and South America. Florida completely sold out their stock of white flowers; churches held special services; and mayors and governors issued proclamations urging that the day be observed.

The wonderful growth of this holiday is absolutely unique. There has been no organization and no literature, except one small pamphlet, to push it. It all grew from that one little notice, which Miss Jarvis, whose love for her own mother inspired her to send that first notice, has never lectured or actively propagated her idea. The response has been entirely spontaneous.

The only explanation of all this lies in the fact that the world is coming to realize the beauty of motherhood and is eagerly glad of this opportunity to give the mothers of men, honor due.

The observance of the day is perfectly simple. The wearing of the white carnation, or any white flower, is the chief ceremony. The churches hold special services with appropriate sermons, and make a great effort to get out all the older people. If you are at home with your mother, you are supposed to observe the day as hers in every way you can think of. If you are away from home, you are supposed to come home if you can, and if you can't, to write her a special letter. Kindness to "somebody's mother" in lieu of your own, is also recommended.

"Soldiers, sailors and statesmen are nationally honored," said Miss Jarvis, "but the mothers who went into the Valley of the Shadow of Death to bear them, are forgotten."

Let us all join in the observance of our new holiday, and make this no longer true.

Dinner Stories

Major Brand Whitlock, of Toledo, was talking about a certain trust magnate. "He's got a bad name," said the mayor-elect, "Hence he can't get a square deal. He's got a bad name for a lawsuit as Dodge had for a manager. Dodge was the new manager of a biscuit concern. There was a workman at the concern who liked to sneak off to a shed at about three o'clock in the afternoon and smoke a pipe and look over the afternoon paper for half an hour or so. Well, one day as the workman sat reading and smoking in the shed, Dodge appeared. 'Who are you?' Dodge asked sternly, frowning at the idle workman. The workman frowned back. 'Huh, who are you?' said he. 'I'm Dodge, the new manager,' was the reply. At this the workman smiled. 'So am I,' he said heartily. 'Come in and have a smoke.'

"An old dandy was on trial for stealing chickens," according to the venerable House Stahl. "He denied his guilt, and one of the deacons of his church was called to testify to his reputation for truth and veracity. 'Now, deacon,' said the prosecutor, 'do you know this defendant?' 'Yes, sir.' 'How well do you know him?' 'Oh, I know him thoroughly well.' 'What is his reputation for truth and veracity in the neighborhood in which he lives?' 'The old man looked thoughtful for a moment. 'You know what I mean?' continued the lawyer. 'Does he tell the truth? Can he tell the truth? Do his neighbors believe what he says?' 'That nigger told the truth?' Does anybody believe him? Why, mistake lawyer, when that nigger wants to call his hawks at feeding time, he has to get somebody else to holler for him."

The last time Lew Dockstader was in Harrisburg, Pa., he hired a colored hatter. The other night this colored person confided to Mr. Dockstader that he suffered from insomnia. "First off I can't sleep at all," Mr. Dockstader said to him, "and when I can, I have such awful dreams that I wish I was awake again."

Mr. Dockstader was properly sympathetic. He wanted to know the character of the dreams that worried his sorrower. "Well, Mr. Dockstader, sir," said he, "last night I dream I died and went to heaven. There stood Mr. Saint Peter at the gate. He held up his hand at me—sort of flagging me off, but de traffic cops do to an automobile. 'No room for you in heaven, nigger,' says old Mister Saint Peter. 'So then I takes my foot in my pants, trots down to the other place. And there at the gate stands old Mister Saint Nick. And he throws up his hand and flags me back. 'No use coming here, nigger,' says he. 'This place is full.' 'An' then, Mister Dockstader, I juss throws up mah hands. An' I says in a diaphanous voice: 'Mah lan! I got to go back to Harrisburg.'"

In London the saloons are open on Sundays between the hours of three and five in the afternoon. A couple of roughs were standing in front of one of these accommodations waiting for it to open when a Salvation Army captain who was passing said, "Men, don't you know that when you enter a saloon you enter hell. 'That's all right, old top,' piped one of the roughs, 'they'll throw us out in a couple of hours.'"

A famous criminal lawyer had won a shockingly bad case by eloquence and trickery, and a rival lawyer said to him bitterly: "Is there any case so low, so foul, so vilely crooked and shameful that you'd refuse it?" "Well, I don't know," the other answered with a smile. "What have you been doing now?"

GILDING the LILY

BY DOROTHY BALE

The hush of education! Was there ever a more striking example of it than toward the end of Miss Esther Mercey's slender suit against Dean Talbot, of the university of Chicago, when things were not going: Dean Talbot's way?

"The great University of Chicago is scandalized!" declared the woman dean's attorney in a plea for the quick ending of the unpleasant testimony. No doubt the great institution of learning was scandalized. So were all the people who followed the proceedings, scandalized, but not because some one had dared to bring suit against one of the brilliant faculty of a great university, but because a woman of such power and standing as Dean Talbot had not the fitness and conscience to help an unwisely student, instead of hurting her.

Of all the pedestals that mortals mount, is there any more contemptible than the pedestal of education supremacy. Money extravagance is nothing beside it, for money doesn't always go hand in hand with mind.

What if Rockefeller millionaires given this university every advantage that money can procure? What if, in turn, it can offer wonderful advantages to students? What if Dean Talbot is a traveled, splendidly educated woman? Are any of these limitations facts reasons why a little human insight and cultured conscience could not be mixed with the mental training offered to students?

Education is not a passport to heaven. Neither is it a passport to terrestrial advancement and honor, unless the germ of deliverance is in the possessor. Haven't you noticed again and again that where several men are working together, you often find that the man in authority—the man drawing the biggest salary—never even has time to visit a university as a show place, while some of his $25-a-week helpers have the sheep-skin mark all over them?

That's not belittling university training. No one denies it's a wonderful opportunity. It opens far-reaching avenues of delight. It puts the key to the treasures of life in the hands of its possessors. But it does not draw its devotees up into some fourth dimension exempt from the laws governing the other three.

Dean Talbot, just as other deans in our universities of learning, has the making or breaking of lives in her hands. She can be an immeasurable power for better or for ill to the thousands of students who turn from it, or she can enslave them.

"You are an unusual woman," Miss Mercey testified Dean Talbot told her, after asking how a comparatively poor girl could wear as pretty clothes as she did. Contrast this use of position and power with the use Jenny Lind made of the position won for her by her training. When she sang for charity in the streets of this country, the rabble stamped and beat sticks, instead of always politely clapping. But did this wonderful singer, whose gift was greater than logic or philosophy, call them or their mothers hard names? No; she said their tears and their smiles, and said reverently: "Isn't it nice I can sing so."

Education and training are powers, all right. But all power is not seated in the heavy end of a club.

Knocking people down is one kind. Helping them up is another. And no one is going to mistake strength because it is mixed with gentleness.

A Perfectly Awful Cigar.

"I bought a cigar named after you, today," said the low comedian, who looked rather pale. "Really?" smiled the prima donna. "I wasn't aware I had so great an honor thrust upon me." "Honor! Suffering smokes!" gasped the comedian; "but I must not say more; rest assured, little one, your secret is safe with me!"—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

A "Pointer" on Better Baking

You can bake better—lots better, too—if you'll simply go to your grocer and say: "A can of Calumet Baking Powder, please."

After that, baking bothers are over. For in the millions of homes where Calumet is used daily, failures are unknown. Every baking comes from the oven light as blithedown, wholesome and tasty and evenly raised.

CALUMET

is the one baking powder that guarantees success. And yet it is much more economical than other kinds. Try a can today—but be sure to get Calumet.

MORAL STRENGTH IS NEED OF CHRISTIANS

THE REV. C. A. COON OF EVANGELICAL GAVE STRONG SERMON AT METHODIST CHURCH.

A STAND FOR THE RIGHT

Is Needed on Part of Men Today Who Should Aid in Creating a Moral Vision and Atmosphere.

The Rev. C. A. Coon of Evansville, occupied the pulpit at the Cargill M. E. church yesterday morning and evening. His evening address was a sermon of power and conviction, the message that the need of men in this day was for greater strength leading to a decisive stand on questions of right and wrong. He attacked the spirit of toleration of crime and vice which is evident on the part of decent men and declared that the change of this spirit to one of active antagonism toward evil was the greatest problem of the age.

In opening his address last evening the Rev. Coon brought out the thought that the emphasis had finally been placed in this nation on the individual as the important part. Man is greater than the state, or the municipality, or than any plan of government. This is something of a revolution from former methods of thinking when the history of the world had to do with the deeds of kings and queens alone. But now great destinies are committed to the common people. It is now the sacred privilege of every man to accomplish some definite work in the affairs of the world. The sphere of influence may be small but it is within his power to lead small forces greatly. It is the manner, the purpose, the end, which is important. Man is born to contend and not to go down before the least obstacles. He is a part of a plan of God. He is here for a purpose which is part of God's system and no matter what his occupation that purpose remains unchanged, the making of true manhood and true womanhood.

"Every man is born to contribute moral vision to his age," said the speaker as his first point of duty for the individual. "We need men who know the difference between right and wrong and who will take a stand for the right. It is not a matter of party lines, or of church or social affiliation. It is a matter of clean moral vision which is of the heart, not of the head."

The speaker went on to explain that we received our impressions and our manner of looking at things very largely through the eyes of others. Through our eyes in turn other people receive their impressions and consequently our influence in matters of morals as well as in other things is vital and all important.

"Man is born to contribute moral vision," said the speaker. "He may not be able to contribute thought, but he can aid in creating a climate, an atmosphere, and by that I mean a healthy, pure, clean, spiritual attitude. We take every measure to secure healthy, sanitary physical surroundings, while we give little thought or thought to the spiritual welfare of our boys and girls."

The final contribution which a man must make to his age is a moral service, said the speaker. It is one thing to have moral convictions and another thing to carry them out, was the idea given. A man counts for just as much as he wants to if he is willing to pay the price in active service.

"It has been said that a bad man's influence neutralizes the good man's influence. That a good man's influence also neutralizes a bad man's and I am glad if I can be one to neutralize a bad influence. The trouble with a lot of good men is that they lack persistence, they have no stamina, they give up too soon, they are too weak to live up to the spiritual vision. I would rather live today than at any other age or generation. We have great problems to cope, the times are full of ferment. We are called to take a stand for the right and it is our part to exert our influence for truth, and God and Christ."

Mr. Coon is a speaker of power and his words came as an inspiration to the audience. He delivered his message with feeling and emphasis that urged to action.

CLINTON CITIZENS HAVE CLEAN-UP DAY

Gratifying Results Seen From Observance of Clean-up Day in Clinton.

Clinton, May 6.—Friday was clean-up day for Clinton and it certainly was a success. Some dirty spots that had not been cleaned for years were made presentable and the call of the village board for everyone who had rubbish to have it deposited in boxes and barrels on the curb in front of their homes where teams would collect. It was hauled it away at the village expense, was responded to by nearly every family and the streets in the early morning were certainly not very filthy. It was every way a most successful event and it is hoped it will follow every year. It will take a day possibly two to draw away the rubbish which is being dumped on John Miller's farm.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

WILLIAM TELL

By Howard L. Rann

William Tell was a Swiss patriot who has thundered down history as the leading shot of his day and generation. He was a plain, unlettered man, and was generally accompanied by a repeating bow-gun, which he used with deadly effect at turkey shoots and other social gatherings.

Although not of a quarrelsome disposition, very few people emerged from a debate with Tell without having an arrowhead tucked so securely under their right shoulder-blade. At the time of which we write Austria was sitting heavily upon the prostrate form of Switzerland, and causing a considerable shortage in her breath, an act which Tell and his friends resented by refusing to pay their poll tax. An Austrian night-watch named Gessler had hung one of his old derby hats on a lamp post, and gave the inhabitants the choice of kowtowing to it or being fitted in to a plain, water-proof caplet. When Tell refused to kowtow, Gessler made arrangements to enter him at public expense, but finally thought of a better form of punishment. Gessler was a coarse, unsympathetic man. He first got Tell all hot up with glances about his marksmanship, then led the patriot's son out in front of the barber shop, and placing a heavy apple on his head ordered Tell to take it with his bow-gun. Tell was enthusiastic over this arrangement, and according to the poet Schiller, who has written several jeremiads on the event, he invited Gessler to repair to a certain congested locality, where no shot had been found for winter fannels. Schiller was a man of refined tastes, and he did not like Gessler because the latter ate with his knife and sat around the house in his stocking feet. Tell finally eared the apple at the first shot, but retained one arrow which he intended to insert in Gessler as a rebuke to tyranny, whereupon Gessler had him indicted by the grand jury, and advertised Tell's funeral for the following Tuesday. At this critical juncture in Switzerland's history Gessler's foot slipped. The patriot escaped, and the next morning, as Gessler was on his way to the creamery to round up a little butter-milk, Tell stepped out from behind a stable oak and filled him so full of plumbed arrows that it was hard to tell him from a feather duster. Tell may still be seen in monument form, standing around Switzerland in a pensive attitude and an asparagus fern mustache.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

A SUCCESSFUL OLD SCHOOL MASTER.

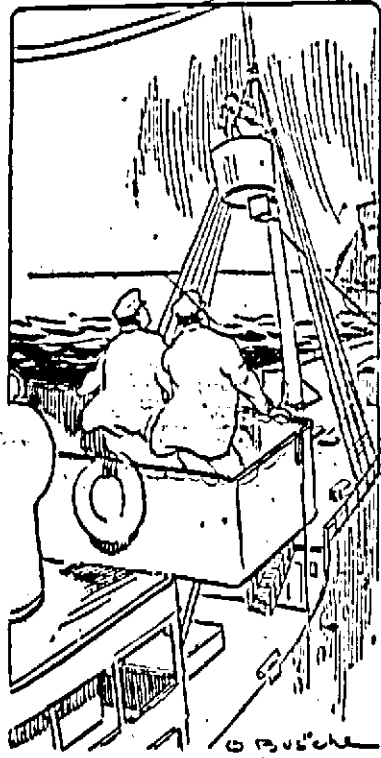

By A. W. MACY.
A good illustration of how a man of ordinary ability may attain success by making the most of his opportunities is found in Alcibiades, an English schoolmaster of the eighteenth century. When returning from a visit to Rome he fell under the notice of the Emperor Charlemagne. It so happened that the emperor was looking for a principal for his royal school, and he offered Alcibiades the place. Alcibiades accepted, and this was the beginning of a great career, especially for a schoolmaster. It was a heavy burden Charlemagne imposed upon him—that he should make the Franks familiar with the Latin language, create schools, and do everything he could to revive learning. But he accepted the task willingly, worked faithfully, and succeeded far beyond his own expectations. His influence on the intellectual development of Europe can hardly be overestimated. It may almost be said that the educational development of the modern world dates from him and his school. Yet all accounts agree that he was a man of only ordinary ability. He succeeded by keeping everlastingly at it.

The Wreck of the Titan

der on deck!" He turned a lever which closed compartments, pushed a button marked "Captain's Room" and crouched down, awaiting the crash. There was hardly a crash. A slight jar shook the forward end of the Titan, and sliding down her fore topmast stay and rattling on deck came a shower of small spars, sails, blocks and wire rope. Then in the darkness to starboard and port two darker shapes shot by—the two halves of the ship she had cut through—and from one of these shapes, where still burned a bluish light, was heard, high above the confused murmur of shouts and shrieks, a sullenly roared:
"May the curse of God light on you and your cheese knife, you brass bound murderers!"

The shipwreck was swallowed in the blackness of the night, the cries were hushed by the clamor of the gale, and the steamship Titan swung back to her course. The first officer had not turned the lever of the engine room telegraph.

The boatwain bounded up the steps of the bridge for instructions.
"Put men at the hatches and doors. Send every one who comes on deck to the chart room. Tell the watchmen to notice what the passengers have learned and clear away that wreck for forward as soon as possible." The voice of the officer was hoarse and strained as he gave these directions, and the "Aye, aye, sir," of the boatwain was uttered in a gasp.

timpani, yeomen and butchers—who, sleeping forward, had been awakened by the terrible blow of the great hollow knife within which they lived.

Three carpenter's mates stood by the door with sounding rods in their hands, which they had just shown the captain—dry. Every face, from the captain's down, wore a look of horror and expectancy. A quartermaster followed Howland in and said:

"Engineer felt no jar in the engine room, sir, and there's no excitement in the stokehold."

"And you watchmen report no alarm in the cabins. How about the steering? Is that man back?" asked the captain. Another watchman appeared as he spoke.

"All asleep in the steering, sir," he said. Then a quartermaster entered with the same report of the fore-cabin.

"Very well," said the captain, rising. "One by one come into my office, watchmen first, then petty officers, then the men. Quartermasters will watch the door, that no man goes out until I have seen him." He passed into another room, followed by a watchman, who presently emerged and went on deck with a more pleasant expression of face. Another entered and came out, then another and another until every man but Howland had been within the sacred precincts, all to wear the same pleased or satisfied look on reappearing. When Howland entered, the captain, seated at a desk, motioned him to a chair and asked his name.

"John Howland," he answered. The captain wrote it down.

"I understand," he said, "that you were in the crew's nest when this unfortunate collision occurred."

"Yes, sir, and I reported the ship as soon as I saw her."

"You are not here to be censured. You are aware, of course, that nothing could be done either to avert this terrible calamity or to save the ship after-ward."

"Nothing at a speed of twenty-five knots an hour in a thick fog, sir." The captain glanced sharply at Howland and frowned.

"We will not discuss the speed of the ship, my good man," he said, "or the rules of the company. You will find, when you are paid at Liverpool, a package addressed to you at the company's office containing £100 in banknotes. This you will receive for your silence in regard to this collision, the reporting of which would embarrass the company and help no one."

"On the contrary, captain, I shall not receive it. On the contrary, sir, I shall speak of this wholesale murder at the first opportunity."

The captain leaned back and stared at the debauched face and trembling figure of the sailor, with which this defiant speech so little accorded. Under ordinary circumstances he would have sent him on deck to be dealt with by the officers. But this was not an ordinary circumstance. In the watery eyes was a look of shock and horror and honest indignation. The accents were those of an educated man, and the consequences hanging over himself and the company for which he worked—already complicated by and involved in his efforts to avert them—this man might precipitate were so extreme that such questions as insolence and defiance in rank were not to be thought of. He must meet and subdue this Tartar on common ground—as man to man.

"Are you aware, Howland," he asked quietly, "that you will stand alone, that you will be discredited, lose your berth and make enemies?"

"I am aware of more than that," answered Howland excitedly. "I know of the power vested in you, captain. I know that you can order me into iron from this room for any offense you wish to imagine. And I know that an unwelcome, uncorroborated entry in your official log concerning me would be evidence enough to bring me life imprisonment. But I also know something of admiralty law—that from my prison cell I can send you and your first officer to the gallows."

"You are mistaken in your conceptions of evidence. I could not cause your conviction by a log book entry, nor could you from a prison infirmity. What are you, may I ask—an ex-lawyer?"

"A graduate of Annapolis—your equal in professional technique."

"And you have interests at Washington?"

"None whatever."

"And what is your object in taking this stand, which can do you no possible good, though certainly not the harm you speak of?"

"That I may do one good, strong act in my useless life, that I may help to arouse such a sentiment of anger in the two countries as will forever end this wanton destruction of life and property for the sake of speed, that will save the hundreds of fishing craft and others run down yearly to their owners, and the crews to their families."

Both men had risen, and the captain was pacing the floor as Howland, with flashing eyes and clinched fists, delivered this declaration.

"A result to be hoped for, Howland," said the former, pausing before him, "but beyond your power or mine to accomplish. Is the amount I named large enough? Could you fill a position on my bridge?"

"I can fill a higher, and your company is not rich enough to buy me."

"You seem to be a man without ambition, but you must have wants."

"Food, clothing, shelter—and whisky," said Howland with a bitter, self-contemptuous laugh. The captain reached down a decanter and two glasses from a swinging tray and said as he placed them before him:

"Here is one of your wants. Fill up." Howland's eyes glistened as he poured out a glassful, and the captain followed.

"I will drink with you, Howland," he said. "Here is to our better understanding." He tossed off the liquor.

Then Howland, who had waited, said: "I prefer drinking alone, captain, and drink the whisky at a gulp."

"Go on deck, now, Howland," he said. "I will talk with you again before we reach soundings. Meanwhile I request—not require, but request—that you hold no useless conversation with your shipmates in regard to this matter."

To the first officer, when relieved at eight bells, the captain said: "He is a broken down wreck with a temporarily active conscience, but is not the man to buy or intimidate. He knows too much. However, we've found his weak point. If he gets snafus before we dock his testimony is worthless. Fill him up and I'll see the surgeon and study up on drugs."

When Howland turned out to breakfast at seven bells that morning he found a pint flask in the pocket of his trousers. Howland lifted the flask and said tenderly, "Well, little one, you must run back to mamma. You're in bad company."

The innocent eyes smiled into his own, and then—a foolish proceeding, which only bachelors are guilty of—he held her above the rail in jesting menace. "Shall I drop you over to the fishes, baby?" he asked, while his features softened to an unwonted smile. The child gave a little scream of fright, and at that instant a young woman appeared around the corner. She sprang toward Howland like a tigress, snatched the child, stared at him for a moment with dilated eyes and then disappeared, leaving him limp and nervousless, breathing hard.

"It is her child," he groaned. "That was the mother look. She is married, married." He resumed his work with a face as near the color of the paint he was scrubbing as the tanned skin of a sailor may become.

Ten minutes later the captain in his office was listening to a complaint from a very excited man and woman.

"And you say, captain," said the captain, "that this man Howland is an old enemy?"

"He is—or was once—a rejected admirer of Mrs. Selfridge. That is all I know of him, except that he has hinted at revenge. My wife is certain of what she saw, and I think the man should be confined."

"Why, captain," said the woman vehemently as she hugged her child, "you should have seen him! He was just about to drop my over as I seized her, and he had such a frightful leer on his face too. Oh, it was hideous! I shall not sleep another wink in this ship, I know."

"I beg you will give yourself no uneasiness, madam," said the captain gravely. "I have already learned something of his antecedents—that he is a disgraced and broken-down naval officer. But as he has sailed three voyages with us I had credited his willingness to work before the mast to his craving for liquor, which he could not satisfy without money. However, as you think, he may be following you. Was he able to learn of your movements—that you were to take passage in this ship?"

"Why not?" exclaimed the husband. "He must know some of Mrs. Selfridge's friends."

"Yes, yes," she said eagerly. "I have heard him spoken of several times."

"Then it is clear," said the captain. "If you will agree, madam, to testify against him in the English courts I will immediately put him in irons for attempted murder."

An incident occurred that morning which drew Howland's thoughts far from the happenings of the night. A few hours of bright sunshine had brought the passengers on deck like bees from a hive, and the two broad promenade resembled in color and life the streets of a city. The watch was busy at the inevitable scrubbing, and Howland, with a swab and bucket, was cleaning the white paint on the starboard funnel, screened from view by the after deck house, which shut off a narrow space at the stern. A little girl ran into the inclosure, laughing and screaming, and clung to his legs while she jumped up and down in an overflow of spirits.

aches lie upon his hoghead couch, and ranted, wept and sighed, and worked up such a frightful grouch that it has never died. It seems surprising that his fame, like Bunquo's ghost, won't down, while men who played a wiser game have faded of all renown. While this old duffer bled and whined a million cheerful jays, who never murmured or repined, went on their useful ways, and they have moldered into dust, unremembered and unnamed, while fame rewarded him who ceased until he broke a lung. We should rejoice that times have changed; the chronic grouch today is shunned as one who is deranged, whose head is full of who.

Depressing Signs.
If there is anything more depressing than rain falling on an overturned tombstone or the sight of a dining-room table covered with dirty dishes, what is it?—Atchison Globe.

Gold.
Numbers of people are suffering just now from irritating colds in the head. A very simple home remedy which brings almost instant relief is to pour half a pint of boiling water on to a dram of pulverized camphor, and to inhale the vapor for about ten to fifteen minutes. The annoying fits of sneezing, running eyes and heavy feeling in the head will quickly yield to this remedy.

To Kill Predatory Worms.
A half teaspoonful of saltpeper dissolved in a quart of water and applied when the earth in pots is dry will kill white worms.

PUBLIC IS ASKED TO AID IN THE MATTER

Persons Answering Fraudulent Advertisements Asked to Notify Gazette.
The Gazette is desirous of keeping out of its columns fraudulent advertising, and asks the assistance of its patrons to that end.
There are any number of concerns in the country who make a living through a nicely worded advertisement, and these unscrupulous people find fertile ground for work among the masses.
Many orders are received in the Gazette mail for advertising which are returned as objectionable and where there is a question as to the qualifications the advertisement is omitted. All newspapers have this experience.
But even with the utmost care there will be an occasional advertisement which will pass the scrutiny of the business department of the paper and find its way into the columns.
The Gazette will deem it a favor if you will report to the office any trouble which may have been experienced through the answering of such an advertisement.

Improvident.
Little Emil was walking home from church with his mother and in passing the ice cream parlors wanted some. His mother's repeated "no" did not satisfy him. She finally said, "I can't buy any; I haven't any money." Emil replied, "Then why didn't you take some when they passed it around?"—National Monthly.

Kansas Society.
Society may suit some people, but so far as we are concerned it consists of nothing but an uncomfortable chair to sit on and a dish of something indigestible to eat.—Atchison Globe.
